Editors’ Introduction

This new issue of Florida Philosophical Review includes six original articles and one book review, including the Presidential Address, winning graduate paper, and winning undergraduate paper from the 57th Annual Meeting of the Florida Philosophical Association hosted by Nova Southeastern University from November 3-5, 2011, in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. The articles deal with key issues in logic and significant questions of value, including those involved in philosophical scholarship, the community, and moral responsibility. Whatever your philosophical interests may be, we are confident that there is something to engage all of our readers in stimulating, critical reflection.

This issue marks the final issue for which we shall serve as editors. Although we will no longer be involved in the processes leading to the publication of each new issue, we shall however serve as Senior Editors and offer oversight as needed to our new Editor and Assistant Editor. Dr. Peter Olen, who has been serving as Assistant Editor on this issue, will now take over as Editor, and Mr. Emre Keskin will become the new Assistant Editor. We are thankful to Peter and Emre for agreeing to serve our philosophical community. As always, we are also thankful to our authors, reviewers, and readers for sustaining the publication of FPR. We look forward to seeing many of you at the next FPA meeting!
