

Notes on Contributors

Andrew Aberdein is Professor of Philosophy at Florida Institute of Technology where he has taught since 2003. He is the co-author of Rhetoric: The Art of Persuasion (Bloomsbury, 2015) and co-editor of The Argument of Mathematics (Springer, 2013). His main philosophical interests are informal logic, the philosophy of mathematics, and virtue theory. aberdein@fit.edu

Anthony Chemero is Professor of Philosophy and Psychology at the University of Cincinnati. His research is both philosophical and empirical; typically, it tries to be both at the same time. His research is focused on questions related to nonlinear dynamical modeling, ecological psychology, complex systems, phenomenology, and artificial life. He is the author of Radical Embodied Cognitive Science (MIT Press, 2009) and, with Stephan Käufer, Phenomenology (Polity Press, 2015). He is currently editing the second edition of The MIT Encyclopedia of the Cognitive Sciences. anthony.chemero@uc.edu

Elijah Chudnoff is Associate Professor of Philosophy at the University of Miami. e.chudnoff@miami.edu

Luis H. Favela is Assistant Professor of Philosophy and Cognitive Sciences at the University of Central Florida. His research is philosophical and empirical, residing at the intersection of the cognitive sciences, neuroscience, philosophy, and psychology. Currently, his primary research aim is to demonstrate the suitability of complexity science and dynamical systems theory to provide the appropriate theories and methods for investigating and understanding mind, where “mind” includes behavior, cognition, and consciousness. luis.favela@ucf.edu

Cheryl Frazier is currently pursuing her PhD in philosophy at the University of Oklahoma, Norman, OK. She received her B.A. in philosophy with a minor in art history from Barry University, Miami, FL. Her research interests focus on the intersection of bioethics and aesthetics. In particular, she is interested in the ethics of mental health, and the ways in which art influences everyday experience. cherylfrazier@ou.edu

Jeff Haines is a graduate student at the Florida State University. His research interests include ethics, social and political philosophy, philosophy of social science, free will, and logic. jhaines@fsu.edu

Katelyn Hallman is majoring in philosophy at the University of North Florida, where she is also President of the UNF Philosophy Club. n00826597@ospreys.unf.edu

Richard N. Manning is Associate Professor in the Department of Philosophy at the University of South Florida. rnm@usf.edu

Wilson Underkuffler is currently a PhD candidate at the University of South Florida working on Early Modern Philosophy. His interests gravitate towards metaphysical topics such as space, time, infinite divisibility, epistemology, and method. Within the canon his focus is on Descartes, Leibniz, and Hume, with attention to historical context and lesser known figures such as de Sales, Bayle, and Barrow. underkuffler@mail.usf.edu

D. Gene Witmer came to the University of Florida after completing his PhD at Rutgers University in 1997. His research mostly fits under the categories of metaphysics and philosophy of mind, often with a specific focus on the doctrine of physicalism. He has worked on such topics as the nature of intrinsic properties, the notion of grounding, functionalism and causation, and the role of a priori knowledge in metaphysics generally. He also has interests in epistemology and the philosophy of religion. For the last eight years, he has served as Department Chair, a fact he thinks may entitle him to sainthood, if, per impossibile, there were such things. gwitmer@ufl.edu